Colonel Edmondson moved to lay General

smith's resolution on the table. The motion to lay on the table was carried.

General Smith offered a resolution that as the fever has so nearly subsided, and the season so far advanced, that this association should set a day when the association should bring its labors to a close, and the sick who have no friends to take care of them should be taken care of at the city hospital. On motion of Colonel Edmondson, the resolution was referred to the executive commit-tee of the association for consideration and General Smith arose to a personal explanaion, and read an editorial from the Ava-anche and a card from President Langstaff headed "An Explanation." The matter was in reference to Mr. Langstaff's Chicago speech, wherein he declared as a "wicked lie" the statement that press reporters were not admitted to the Howard meetings. He asserted as a fact that Mr. Langstaff had repeatedly hald back the meetings and stopped the proceedings of meetings until the reporters had left the room. He (General Smith) believed the association had a right to hold secret meetings. He believed that editors had no business in their meetings. This was a matter of principle with him and not any objection to the presence of reporters. Mr

I take pleasure in recommending this school to my friends and the public generally. The salubrity of the climate, the conduct of the domestic department, and the qualifications of the teachers, place the school in the first rank of educational institutions. This is really a Home School. The bors are well behaved and happy, and under the best domestic, educational and religious influences.
